About the Role

As a member of the real estate practice, you will be responsible for

- Drafting and reviewing contracts and analyzing specific civil and commercial dispositions,
- Preparing real estate litigation and drafting legal acts for the civil or commercial courts, as well as strengthening and developing the litigation department.
- Carrying out real estate due diligence,
- Drafting real estate related legal memoranda on specific matters,
- Working with our knowledge department in order to implement new AI solutions and new contractual environment by producing so called “green provisions” for contracts,
- Being reliable for clients (strong service orientation).

About You

- You have 3 to 7 years' experience in a Luxembourg law firm specializing in real estate law,
- Experience in litigation is an advantage,
- You have a university degree in law (equivalent to Master 2) and you have attended during your bachelor civil law courses,

- You are admitted to the Luxembourg Bar (list 1 or list 4),
- Fluent in English and French,
- Ability and willingness to be part of the Luxembourg real estate community,
- You are solution oriented, proactive and a team player,
- Develop an internal and external network.

What we can Offer

Dentons is always looking to invest in the highest quality talent, recognising that our success is built on the diverse and unique strengths of each member of our firm.

Our Real Estate practice is ambitious, recognised and offers the opportunity to develop, grow and have a real career path to partnership level. We provide realistic, high quality, bespoke solutions. Our experience enables us to deal with transactions of all types and complexities, both domestic and international. Our litigation practice focuses on real estate issues. Our team covers a wide range of areas and sectors and works closely with other specialists within Dentons.
